

Dr James Slimings

Dr James Slimings is a specialist in vocal training, experienced at working in all levels of vocal education, he brings his in-depth knowledge of singing anatomy to enable you to properly train and take care of your choir's voices; safely and efficiently.

As a conductor, James has made a reputation in Scotland as one of the up and coming directors on the scene. He is instrumental in the delivery of the ensemble provision for both undergraduate and postgraduate vocalists at the Royal Conservatoire of Scotland. Passionate about education, James has a long standing relationship with the National Youth Choirs of Great Britain, having been as section leader with their Boys, Cambiata, and Training choirs and where he also facilitates Ready, Steady, Sing workshops, engaging thousands of children in fun singing workshops throughout the country.

In demand as an animateur, James has given workshops for the Princes Teaching Institute in association with the University of Cambridge on four separate occasions. Through this, he has been asked to give workshops for Pimlico Academy, Lancaster Royal Grammar School, and the Tees Valley Youth Choir.

James has a very busy career as a solo singer and musical leader in various other settings. Come meet him and get blethering about all the other wonderful projects he is involved with!
